

Co-Creative Conversations

We can go faster alone but further together.

The aim of this program is to build stronger, trust based, collaborative, and productive partnerships with all key stakeholders, and together create a future that you could never have created on your own.

Context:

Over many years of dealing with workplace misunderstandings sometimes resulting in conflict, we have noticed a very clear pattern: people simply do not understand one another as well as we think we do. We often assume we know what others mean when they communicate with us, but what we hear is based on our thoughts going through our heads, the feelings going through our hearts, and the solutions we want, and may have nothing to do with what the other person is saying. Therefore, while we presume we understand, in reality true communication has not taken place. For this reason, it is critical to learn the skills of co-creative conversations to be able to work more effectively with others.

This program focuses intensively on skill development and application through reinforced practice - using real life simulation exercises. Participants leave the program with the skills and the confidence to apply their learning on the job.
